RESEARCH PROJECTS

---

- Design Analytics Spring 2017–Present
A human-centered AI investigation for assisting instructors in assessing and providing feedback on a range of visual and conceptual characteristics present within student design work. Engaged co-design methods, such as discussions and workshops to understand instructors' situated practices and needs. Deployed AI-based analytics via dashboards, as a technology probe, in situated course contexts and established their efficacy through a mixed methods evaluation.

- TweetBubble Fall 2013–Fall 2016
A Chrome Extension for Twitter users to follow @usernames, #hashtags associations without tabs or windows. Conducted studies during societal events such as the Academy Awards and Super Bowl. Performed a mixed methods evaluation, including qualitative analysis using grounded theory and quantitative ideation metrics.
- Event Indicators Spring 2016–Fall 2016
A weakly supervised approach for extracting and clustering event indicators from Twitter social media. Used the bootstrap technique to acquire a variety of civil unrest event cues, starting from a single strong event indicator.
- BigSemantics Fall 2012–Fall 2016
A software architecture for developing meta-metadata semantics powered dynamic exploratory browsing interfaces. Developed new data models, extraction rules, and presentation semantics for social media. Developed a RESTful web service to facilitate semantics-driven application development across a range of contexts.
- EvolutionWorks Fall 2011–Spring 2012
A free-form, zoomable space facilitating browsing, collection, and sensemaking of research papers interconnections. Developed interface for presenting papers as cards and algorithm for determining representative terms present within a cluster when the user zooms out. Conducted user studies to compare the interface with tabbed browsers.
- PhotoNav Fall 2011–Spring 2012
A wearable computing investigation for assisting pedestrian navigation through the means of photographs. Developed the NavCurator application for the specification of navigation paths over maps. Conducted user studies to compare pedestrian navigation using handheld and head-mounted displays.
